

Hello,

My name is Bridget and I am 25 y/o. I currently reside in TX but b/c of the military I have been stationed elsewhere. I grew up in a single parent household and two older brothers. Growing up we used to sit around the radio at 7 pm a listen to a Christian broadcast called "The Odyssey".

I love that wherever I have lived I have been able to listen to my Christian music and sermons. I am now married and husband has allowed our family to donate to the KLOVE radio station in our area. I enjoy listening to wholesome radio on the drive to and from work. If I miss church I am always lifted up w/ a sermon or music on the radio.

I have always looked forward to raising my children in a Christian home and not having to expose them to "the world" until they had to see it in school. I want holy thoughts for my family; thoughts that are and just. Our mind is a battleground. The enemy enters through our environment. I do not want to fill that environment w/ filth, which is why I do not listen to Howard Stern or other stations.

If the FCC decides to allow anyone and everyone have their views voiced on Christian stations, we would no longer be able to call them Christian stations. Obviously they are the cities on the hill and not everyone will agree w/ the statements or sermons. We are not stepping on any toes b/c it is whoever decision to tune in. We should be allowed to encourage one another and usher in lost souls to God.

Christian radio is stemmed off of donations. If the prices for air time and licensing are increased, this makes it harder for the station to get the funding. From what I understand, the process to put up towers is already difficult. Why try to make these issues more complicated to push through. I am sending this commentary along with prayer.

I am not very good w/ words b/c my thoughts keep wondering. All I can think about is the people who have not heard the Good News. I don't want to live in a world where encouraging words are hard to come by. I want my spirits to be lifted on my way to work so that I may bless someone else's day. I want to be calm in rush hour and be able to let the speedster cut me off and not get upset.

I love my KLOVE radio station. Please don't hurt the community but hindering it's mission.

Thank you for your time.

-Bridget
